

Glasi Worker Agreement

Last updated May 2026

What this is

This is the agreement between you and Glasi Ltd ("Glasi", "we", "us") that sets out what it means to download, log in to, and use the Glasi platform. These terms are being shown to you at setup of the Glasi app, post successful onboarding with Numbermill Ltd, your employer. By ticking to accept this agreement, or by logging in to the Glasi app, you confirm that you have read, understood, and agreed to it.

This agreement governs how you use the Glasi platform: joining sessions, responding to shift requests, completing shifts, and progressing through the tier system. It is not your employment contract. Your employment for tax, National Insurance, and statutory rights is with Numbermill Ltd, who are your employer through a separate engagement.

Before accepting this agreement you should also have been given a Key Information Document by Glasi. The Key Information Document sets out, in a single short document, the umbrella company that will employ you (Numbermill), the assignment rate that Glasi will pay Numbermill on your behalf, the deductions Numbermill will make from that assignment rate, and your minimum gross pay. If you have not been given a Key Information Document, do not accept this agreement and contact us first.

If anything in this agreement is unclear, please contact us at hello@glasi.co.uk before accepting.

1. About Glasi

Glasi is a platform that connects vetted workers with bars and hospitality venues that need short-notice floor support during busy periods. Bars subscribe to Glasi to request workers for shifts. Workers join sessions, respond to requests, and are dispatched to bars near where they signed up.

Glasi operates the platform. We do not employ you. We do not pay you directly. We do not own the venues you work at. Our role is to invite you to sessions, run the dispatch process, and pay Numbermill on your behalf so that Numbermill can pay you.

2. Your relationship with Glasi

You are not a Glasi employee. Glasi is not your employer.

Your employer for the work you carry out through the platform is Numbermill Ltd. Numbermill pays you, deducts tax and National Insurance through PAYE, accrues your holiday entitlement, and provides the statutory rights you are entitled to as their employee. You will have a separate engagement contract with Numbermill that covers the employment side of your work.

As Numbermill's employee, you have the same statutory employment rights as any other employee. These include:

- the right to be paid at least the National Minimum Wage or National Living Wage, on time, in full, and at the intervals set out in your Key Information Document;
- the right to paid holiday entitlement, accrued and paid by Numbermill in line with their employment contract with you;
- the right to be automatically enrolled into a workplace pension by Numbermill, if you are eligible;
- the right to a written employment contract from Numbermill;
- the right to a payslip and, where applicable, a reconciliation statement showing how your gross pay is calculated from the assignment rate.

If you have any questions or concerns about your pay, your payslip, your tax, or your statutory rights, you should speak to Numbermill first. If you are not satisfied with their response, contact us at hello@glasi.co.uk and we will help where we can.

This Glasi agreement covers only your participation on the Glasi platform: how you use the Glasi app, how you join sessions, how you respond to requests, how the tier system works, and what happens if things go wrong on our side.

You are not obliged to take any specific shift. You can decline any request, for any reason, with no negative consequence. You can leave the Glasi platform at any time.

3. Joining a session

A session is a scheduled operational window during which Glasi runs dispatch in your area. Sessions usually cover busy periods at multiple bars, for example a Friday evening across central Southampton.

You will be invited to sessions when:

- you have signalled availability for the session time on the Glasi app, and
- at least one bar in the session is in your catchment (near your registered address).

Receiving an invitation does not commit you to anything. You can accept the invitation and join the session, or you can ignore it.

What you confirm when you join a session

When you tap to join a session, the Glasi app will ask you to confirm three things before the join completes. You must confirm that:

- it is you using the account, and not someone else;
- you have read and agreed to the health and safety information for every bar in your catchment that could send requests during this session;
- you are not under the influence of alcohol or drugs, and are physically and mentally fit to work.

You must answer these honestly. If you cannot confirm any of them, do not join the session. Providing a false confirmation is a breach of this agreement and of the acceptable use rules in Section 15, and may result in suspension or offboarding from the platform.

If a new bar comes into your catchment after your last session, you will be asked to read and agree to its health and safety information before you can confirm the second item above. Until you have done so, that bar will not be able to send you shift requests.

Where you need to be during a session

Your participation in Glasi is tied to the home address you signed up with (your "registered address"). When you join a session, you should be at or near your registered address, and you should remain there for as long as you stay in the session. If you move significantly away from your registered address during a session, Glasi may remove you from the session.

If your home address changes permanently, contact us at hello@glasi.co.uk so that we can update your registered address.

Joining a session means you have opted in to receive shift requests from bars in that session. Sessions are the only way you can be sent shift requests. Joining does not commit you to anything beyond what is described above, does not put you on call, and is not itself paid work. You are not required to keep the app in the foreground, you are not required to respond to any particular request, and you are not required to accept any shift. The Glasi app works in the background and will send you a push notification when a shift request comes in.

Joining a session is simply how you become eligible to be considered. There is no guarantee that any shift request will be submitted during a session, that you will see a request before it closes, that you will be selected if you tap available, or that you will receive any shift at all.

You can leave a session at any time, for any reason. We ask that you communicate with us if you do, so we can plan dispatch accordingly, but you are not required to.

4. Responding to a shift request

When a bar in your session submits a shift request, the request is sent to you if you are eligible. Eligibility requires that the bar is in your catchment and that you have previously read and agreed to that bar's venue-specific health and safety information.

Each request has a short response window, shown in the app. Within that window you can:

- Tap "I'm available" if you want the shift. This adds you to the pool of workers considered for that request. It does not guarantee you will be selected. Tapping available does not pay you anything by itself.
- Tap "I'll pass" if you don't want this shift. This is a legitimate choice and you are entitled to make it without explanation. There is no negative consequence for passing.
- Not respond. If you do not see the notification, or choose not to respond, this is not a breach of anything. The platform simply does not consider you for that request.

Only one worker is selected per shift request. The selection is automatic and Glasi does not disclose how it is made.

If you pass on multiple requests in a row

Sessions are designed for workers who are genuinely available to work during the session window. If you pass on multiple requests in a row in the same session, the Glasi app may remove you from that session. You will see a message explaining what has happened. You can rejoin the same session if it is still running, or join a future session, at any time.

Removal from a session for repeated passes has no effect on your tier, your pay rate, your points total, or your standing on the Glasi platform. It only affects your participation in that one specific session. Nothing in this agreement requires you to tap available on any shift request, ever.

5. If you are dispatched

If you are selected ("dispatched") for a shift, the app will show you the assignment details and ask you to confirm you are heading to the venue. Confirm and start walking straight away. The bar is told a worker is on the way, and you are committing to attend.

The assignment details include the bar you are going to, the address, the shift start time and duration, the type of work (floor support: glass collection, table clearing, floor presentation), and any venue-specific health and safety information you have previously read and agreed to. If anything in the assignment details does not match what you expected, contact us before setting off.

If you do not start moving toward the bar promptly after dispatch, the app may automatically cancel the shift so the bar can be served by another worker. See Section 8.

When you arrive at the bar, the manager will give you a 4-digit clock-in code. Enter this in the app to start the shift. At the end of the shift, the manager gives you a clock-out code, you enter it, and the shift is complete.

While you are on shift, you are doing floor support work for the bar. This includes glass collection, table clearing, keeping the floor area tidy, and being present and visible to customers. You do not pull pints, take orders, handle cash, or do anything that requires a personal licence. If a bar asks you to do work outside this scope, you can politely decline and contact us.

You should follow the bar's reasonable instructions during the shift, treat their staff and customers with respect, and follow any health and safety information they have provided.

If something goes wrong during a shift (you feel unsafe, you are asked to do something inappropriate, an incident occurs), contact Glasi as soon as possible.

6. The tier system

Glasi has a five-tier classification for workers: New, Reliable, Trusted, Elite, and Elite+. Each tier has a fixed hourly pay rate.

Tier	Name	Hourly rate
1	New	£12.71
2	Reliable	£13.71

Tier	Name	Hourly rate
3	Trusted	£14.71
4	Elite	£15.71
5	Elite+	£16.71

You start at Tier 1 (New). You progress through tiers by accruing points (see Section 7). The points required to reach each tier are shown in the app. The progression is automatic: as soon as your points total crosses the threshold for the next tier, your tier and pay rate update at the same moment.

Tier progression is one-way. Once you have earned a tier, that tier is locked in. Your pay rate does not go down. There is no mechanism in the platform that reduces a tier you have already earned.

7. Points

Points are awarded for engagement with the Glasi platform. Points only ever go up. You cannot lose points once they are earned. There are no negative points and no point penalties for any action.

The actions that earn points, the value of each, and the thresholds for moving between tiers are shown in the app and may be adjusted from time to time. Points you have already earned and kept will not be removed or reduced when changes are made.

Some points are credited subject to a later condition (for example, completing the shift you were dispatched to). If the condition is not met, those points do not crystallise. This is not a deduction of earned points; the points were pending until the condition was met. The conditions, where they apply, are shown in the app.

Points themselves have no monetary value. You cannot exchange points, trade them, withdraw them, or convert them to anything. They exist to govern tier progression and to inform the platform's selection process when more than one worker is available for a request.

8. After dispatch

Being dispatched only happens after two things have already happened of your own free will: you joined the session, and you tapped "I'm available" on the specific shift request the dispatch was generated from. Because both of these were your own choices, there is a reasonable expectation that you will attend the shift you have been dispatched to.

Once dispatched, you are expected to confirm in the app and start your journey to the bar straight away. If you do not start moving toward the bar promptly after dispatch, the Glasi app will warn you and, shortly after, automatically cancel the shift so that the bar can be served by another worker.

Automatic cancellation for not moving has the following effects:

- Any points that were pending on the shift are forfeited.
- No further points credit for that shift.

- The cancellation is recorded against your reliability profile on the platform. Reliability influences how often you are invited to future sessions and your dispatch ranking. It does not affect your pay rate, your tier, or any points you have already earned and kept.
- Repeated cancellations may contribute to offboarding from the Glasi platform (see Section 11).

If you have a genuine reason for not being able to attend a shift you have been dispatched to, use the cancel option in the app (see Section 9) rather than letting the automatic cancellation run.

9. If you cannot make it

If, after being dispatched, you find that you genuinely cannot attend the shift, you can cancel through the Glasi app.

Voluntary cancellation has similar effects to automatic cancellation: any pending points for the shift are forfeited, no further points credit for the shift, and the cancellation is recorded against your reliability profile (under a voluntary classification rather than the no-movement classification).

Treating both paths similarly is deliberate. It encourages you to use the voluntary cancel option rather than letting the automatic cancellation run, which lets the platform reassign the shift cleanly and quickly.

If you find yourself cancelling frequently, please consider whether your patterns of joining sessions and tapping "I'm available" are aligned with your actual availability. Repeated cancellations may contribute to offboarding from the Glasi platform (see Section 11).

10. Your engagement and your employer

Numbermill is your employer. The Glasi platform exists, in part, to deliver work to you that you are employed by Numbermill to perform. So that Numbermill can manage their employment relationship with you properly, Glasi shares operational data about your activity on the platform with Numbermill on a regular basis.

The information Glasi shares with Numbermill includes:

- session invitations you have received, and whether you joined them, declined them, or did not respond;
- shift requests sent to you during sessions you joined, and your responses;
- shifts you were dispatched to and what happened with them (arrival, clock-in, clock-out, completion, cancellation);
- assignment schedules and shift completion records used to calculate your pay;
- platform-side disclosures and acknowledgements that Numbermill needs for compliance (for example, your acceptance of this agreement and your acknowledgement of your Key Information Document);
- other operational data Numbermill reasonably needs to run payroll, accrue holiday, and meet their statutory employer obligations toward you.

Numbermill has a legitimate interest in receiving this information as your employer, and the sharing is also necessary for the performance of your employment contract with them. The legal basis for this sharing, and your rights in relation to it, are covered in more detail in our privacy notice (see Section 13).

Because you are employed by Numbermill, Numbermill has a reasonable expectation that you will be genuinely engaged with the Glasi platform: joining sessions when you are available, responding to shift requests during sessions you have joined, and completing shifts when you are dispatched. Numbermill does not expect you to take every shift, but they do expect you to be a real, engaged employee rather than an employment record without corresponding activity.

If you repeatedly decline session invitations, do not join any sessions over an extended period, pass on most or all requests in sessions you do join, or otherwise show patterns of non-engagement, Numbermill may conclude that you are not actively engaged in employment with them. What Numbermill does about this is their decision as your employer: they may contact you to discuss your situation, continue your employment, or end your employment with them. Glasi shares the underlying engagement data with Numbermill and does not make these decisions on their behalf.

If Numbermill ends your employment with them for any reason, your participation in the Glasi platform will end at the same time. Glasi can only dispatch shifts to workers who are currently employed through an umbrella partner. Glasi may also offboard you from the platform independently of Numbermill, in the circumstances set out in Section 11.

If you have any questions or concerns about how your engagement is being assessed, contact Numbermill directly. You can also contact Glasi at hello@glasi.co.uk and we will help where we can.

11. Leaving the platform

You can leave Glasi at any time, for any reason, with no notice required. Contact us at hello@glasi.co.uk to be offboarded, or simply stop signalling availability and stop joining sessions.

If you leave Glasi, your engagement with Numbermill will also end. Numbermill will follow their own offboarding process for the employment side.

We may also offboard you in the following situations:

- after repeated cancellations after dispatch, whether automatic or voluntary (see Sections 8 and 9), where your reliability profile suggests you are not reliably attending shifts you have been dispatched to,
- if your engagement with the platform is so low over an extended period that Numbermill, or Glasi independently, considers you no longer an active worker (see Section 10),
- if you breach this agreement seriously, including conduct that puts a bar, a customer, another worker, or Glasi at risk,
- if Numbermill is no longer willing to continue your employment with them.

In any case where Glasi offboards you, we will tell you the reason and give you a reasonable opportunity to respond before the decision is final, except in cases of serious or immediate risk where we may need to act quickly.

12. Your pay and protecting yourself

Your pay comes from Numbermill, not from Glasi. You will receive a payslip from Numbermill for each pay period. The payslip should show the assignment rate, the deductions Numbermill has made (employer National Insurance, holiday pay, Numbermill's margin, employer pension where applicable, and any apprenticeship levy), your gross pay, and then the deductions from your gross pay (Income Tax, employee National Insurance, employee pension contributions, and any student loan repayments).

You should keep your payslips and check them carefully when you receive them. If anything on a payslip does not look right (deductions you do not understand, pay that does not match what you expected, a different umbrella company name or PAYE reference from one payslip to the next), raise it with Numbermill first. If you are not satisfied with their response, contact us.

HMRC publishes guidance for workers employed through umbrella companies that you may find useful. In particular, be cautious of any offer from an umbrella company that promises pay arrangements that look too good to be true, untaxed payments, separate payments from anyone other than the umbrella company, or requests to sign additional agreements alongside your employment contract. These can be signs of a tax avoidance scheme. If anything along these lines is ever offered to you in connection with a Glasi shift, decline it and contact us immediately.

13. Your information and privacy

When you use the Glasi platform, we process personal data about you including your contact details, your postcode (for distance calculation), your engagement metrics on the platform, and your shift records. We share some of this data with Numbermill so that Numbermill can employ you and pay you. Glasi and Numbermill act as separate data controllers for their respective purposes.

Our full privacy notice is available at glasi.co.uk/privacy. It explains what we collect, why we collect it, how long we keep it, and your rights under UK data protection law.

Glasi is registered with the Information Commissioner's Office under registration number ZC132032.

14. Changes to this agreement

We may update this agreement from time to time. If we make material changes, we will notify you via the Glasi app and ask you to accept the updated version before continuing to use the platform. Minor changes (formatting, clarifications, contact details) may be made without notice.

The latest version of this agreement is always available on the Glasi app.

15. Using the Glasi platform

Your account

Your login to the Glasi app is personal to you. You must not share your login credentials with anyone else, or allow anyone else to use the app while logged in as you. If you suspect someone has accessed your account, contact us at hello@glasi.co.uk immediately so we can secure it.

Acceptable use

You agree to use the Glasi platform only for its intended purpose: receiving session invitations, responding to shift requests, attending and completing shifts you have been dispatched to, and the related activities described in this agreement.

You must not:

- use the platform fraudulently, including by entering clock-in or clock-out codes without actually attending the shift, claiming shifts you did not complete, or otherwise misrepresenting your activity;
- attempt to access parts of the platform you are not authorised to use, or attempt to circumvent the platform's security or operational mechanisms;
- decompile, reverse engineer, copy, or modify the app or any other part of the Glasi platform;
- reproduce, distribute, or commercialise any part of the Glasi platform, brand, name, content, or data;
- use the platform in any way that interferes with its operation, or that disrupts other workers, bars, or Glasi;
- provide false or misleading information to Glasi or Numbermill at any time.

If you breach any of these rules, Glasi may suspend or offboard you from the platform, with or without notice depending on the seriousness of the breach. We may also share information about your conduct with Numbermill and, where appropriate, with law enforcement.

Ownership of the platform

The Glasi platform, including the app, the website, the dispatch engine, the brand, the Glasi name, the platform logo, and all related content and software, is owned by Glasi Ltd and is protected by intellectual property law. Your use of the platform under this agreement gives you a personal, limited, non-transferable, revocable right to use the app to participate in the Glasi service. It does not transfer any ownership or other intellectual property rights to you.

Service availability

Glasi provides the platform on an "as available" basis. We work to keep the platform running reliably, but we do not guarantee that it will always be available, error-free, uninterrupted, or free from delay. The platform relies on third-party services that are outside our control, including mobile networks, map providers, push notification services, your phone's operating system, and your phone's location services. The platform may be affected by the availability or performance of those services, or by your phone's settings (for example, if location services are turned off, the app cannot detect movement or arrival).

Where the platform is unavailable, impaired, or delayed, no session invitations or shift requests can be sent or received, no dispatches can occur, no shifts can be clocked in or out through the app, and no points can be earned. We will work to restore the service as quickly as we reasonably can.

Limitation of liability

To the extent permitted by law, Glasi is not liable to you for:

- platform downtime, interruptions, delays, or technical problems, including any shifts you were unable to receive, accept, attend, or complete as a result;
- the actions or omissions of any bar, including how a bar treats you during a shift, the bar's compliance with health and safety, or any decision the bar makes about a shift;
- the actions or omissions of Numbermill, including pay calculation, deductions, holiday accrual, pension enrolment, or any employment decision Numbermill makes;
- loss or damage that arises indirectly from your use of the platform, including loss of expected earnings, loss of opportunity, wasted travel time, or other indirect or consequential loss.

Nothing in this section limits any liability that cannot lawfully be limited or excluded, including liability for death or personal injury caused by negligence, liability for fraud or fraudulent misrepresentation, or any other liability that the law does not allow to be limited.

16. Legal

This agreement is governed by the laws of England and Wales. Any dispute arising from this agreement will be resolved in the courts of England and Wales.

This agreement, together with the Glasi Privacy Notice, your Key Information Document, and your separate engagement with Numbermill Ltd, sets out the entire agreement between you and Glasi in relation to your use of the platform. It replaces any earlier discussions, representations, or agreements about the same subject matter.

If any clause of this agreement is found to be unenforceable, the rest of the agreement remains in force. A failure or delay by Glasi to enforce any right under this agreement is not a waiver of that right.

Glasi may transfer or assign its rights and obligations under this agreement to another company, for example as part of a sale or restructuring of the business. We will tell you if this happens. You may not transfer or assign your rights or obligations under this agreement to anyone else.
